

Course Changes for the academic year 2020-21

Please find information below regarding the plans for the coming year for the Architecture Course at Cambridge, in the light of COVID-19.

We are greatly looking forward to welcoming new students to Cambridge in October and remain committed to delivering world class education on site if we can. Inevitably we are having to make some changes to the advertised programme to mitigate against risks to health and to give you the best academic experience in the circumstances. We will continue to monitor and respond to the changing public health situation.

We are glad to say that the changes in Architecture are relatively minor:

- All lectures will be delivered online
- Supervisions, workshops, studio teaching and seminars will be delivered in the architecture department in person where possible
- All written examinations will be replaced by coursework which will be submitted online throughout the year

Otherwise we hope to deliver the course much as usual. There are likely to be restrictions on using spaces such as workshops and studios for some or all of the year so you may have to do your studio work in your college rooms for some or all of the year. Many students chose to do this anyway, but we are anticipating you will be able to bring your work in to show studio teachers and meet them face-to-face. The studio teachers and lecturers are busy planning projects that will respond positively to these conditions.

In all other respects the course will be very much as described. The same lectures will be delivered and the same course material taught.

We hope to see you in October. If you do have any concerns, please contact the department via Sue Luxon, sue.luxon@aha.cam.ac.uk.
